MORRISVILLE SURVEY

NEW HOPE, July 25.—The home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Yos, of Bridge street, was the scene of an attractive wedding at 11 o'clock Saturday morning when their daughter, Miss Sarah
B. Yos, was married to Carswell Ashton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Ashton, of Cottage Hill, Lambertville. The Rev. Samuel A. Jackson, pastor of the New Hope Presbyterian Church, was the officiating clergyman.

Decorations of the parlors were profuse in flowers of the season and a large number of guests were present.
The bridesmaid was Miss Mabel Yos, sister of the bride, while the bridegroom was attended by his brother, Bernard Ashton. Miss Mildred Mc-Keown, of New Hope, played the wedding march.

The gown worn by the bride was of white figured net, set off by a large white picture hat and she carried white rosebuds. Miss Mabel Yos was dressed in pink silk French muslin, trimmed with pale blue; a picture hat
of pink and blue slippers, and she carried pink rosebuds.

Guests present were: Mr. and Mrs.
Harry Yos, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Ashton and daughter, Eleanor and sons, Ralph, Herbert, Clifford and Theodore, Mrs. Ella Naylor, Mr. and Mrs.
Charles Heins, Jr., and son, Earle, Mr.
and Mrs. John Eichlin and children,
Jack and Mabel, Mr. and Mrs. John Meehan and daughter, Barbara, Mrs.
William Bush, Mrs. Mary Fields, Mr.
and Mrs. Charles Kitchen, Miss Eleanor Tettermer and Miss Ellen Lear.

ception, the couple left for a wedding

DOYLESTOWN, July 25.—Economy is being practiced at the Bucks County Prison these days without sacrificing the efficiency of the plant and the care of the prisoners, and incidentally Mr.
and Mrs. John Taxpayer are being saved some money.

The prisoners are busily engaged at the present time, painting the jail roof and other adjoining building tops. A barrel of paint was purchased by the county and the painting job is over one-half completed at the present time and according to Head Keeper Grant Myers, "the job is being well done."

MORRISVILLE, July 25.—H. C. Par-male, an engineer representing the Public Service Commission of Pennsylvania, made an inspection of the territory out-lined in the petition of the Yardley and Lower Makefield Township Water Company for the allotment of the territory from Yardley
to the Morrisville Borough line.

Parmale also went over the territory
which is now served by Morrisville Borough and the additional territory
the borough is asking for. It is expected that a decision in the case will soon be forthcoming from the commission.

Parmale will make his report to the commission with his recommendations and then the commission will make its ruling. Morrisville Borough is represented in this case by Senator Clarence J. Buckman, while the Lower Makefield Water Company has Thomas
Ross as counsel. Mayor Thomas B.
Stockham and Councilman George W.
Burgner represented Morrisville at the meeting with the engineer.

Morrisville claims the Yardley company seeks territory which should be served by the borough.

DROP MAIL FROM PLANE

Philadelphia, July 25.—Major James H. Doolittle, holder of the coast to coast air record, accompanied by Miss Anne Mattison, Washington, a decentant of George Washington, and A. F.
Maple, New York, dropped a sack of mail at Mustin Field at the Navy Yard here at 7:35 a. m. After circling the field twice, Major Doolittle zoomed his plane upward and in a few minutes it was headed in a southerly direction.

UPHOLD DICTATORSHIP

Berlin, Germany, July 25.—Government by dictatorship in the State of Prussia was upheld by the Supreme Court in a decision handed down at Leipzig today.

An injunction sought by the Socialist Ministry in the State, ousted by Chancellor VonPappen last week, was denied. VonPappen will continue to rule Prussia like a king of old, at least until after Parliamentary election next Sunday.

In rejecting Prussia's petition today,
however, the court made it plain it was not finally decided whether the VonPappen dictatorship is constitutional or not. An injunction at that time would be inappropriate, however,
because it would impair the authority of the state.

LIGHTNING STRIKES A LAKE STREET RESIDENCE

Bolt Narrowly Misses Mr. and Mrs. Charles Waters; Dog
Stunned

GARAGE ALSO IS HIT

A bolt of lightning struck the residence of Charles Waters, colored, 749 Lake street, twice on Saturday and narrowly missed both Mr. Waters and his wife. The bolt stunned a dog so severely that it had to be shot by police.

It was during the terrific storm
which beat down upon Bristol Saturday afternoon that the Waters house was struck. Both Mr. and Mrs. Waters were at home. Mrs. Waters sitting near a side door which was open and the dog lying in the doorway.

Mr. Waters started to go upstairs to close a window as the rain was beating in. As he mounted the steps the bolt hit the outside corner of the house, tore its way through, came down the stairway, and stunned the dog. Mrs. Waters was unharmed.

The house was also struck on the opposite corner, facing Silver Lake,
and weather boarding was torn off
both corners. A garage in the rear was also struck.

The dog began frothing at the mouth
and police were called and shot the animal.

POST OFFICE HERE WAS ONE OF ORIGINAL 75

Will Mark Bi-Centennial of Washington on National
Post Office Day

TO FLY A HUGE FLAG

Special services will be held tomorrow in the postoffice here which is one of the 75 original postoffices in 1789, when George Washington was inaugurated. The celebration is part of the program arranged for National Post Office Day in honoring the George Washington Bi-Centennial.

A large picture of Washington will be hung in the corridor draped with a flag and with a bouquet of flowers beneath it. The flag above the picture was made in Bristol during the days of the Centennial. It was made by the late Mrs. James Randall in the wheel-wright shop of the late James Randall, father of Merton Randall, on Bath street. The stars were painted on the flag at that time by Charles Booz, a painter employed by Mr. Randall. It was impossible to purchase suitable blue material, and so the blue field and white stars were made with paint.

On the pole outside of the post office there will fly one of the largest flags in Bucks County. This flag was given to the Bristol Republican Organization during the Garfield campaign.
It measures 20 x 10 feet.

All post office employees will wear
red, white and blue ribbons tomorrow.

Postal records giving data as to the date when the first post office was established here are incomplete.
Green's History of Bristol says: "A postal system was projected in conjunction with the early roads. In the fifth month 1683, William Penn issued an order for the establishment of a postoffice, and granted to Henry Waldy, of 'Tekoney,' authority to hold
it. The rates of postage were as follows: From the Falls to Philadelphia,
via Bristol, three pence; to Chester,
five pence; to Newcastle, seven pence,
and to Maryland, nine pence; from Philadelphia to Chester, two pence; to Newcastle, four pence, and to Maryland, six pence. This post went only once a week, and the governor requested Phineas Pemberton to carefully publish full information concerning it on the meeting house door
and other public places."

"Among the duties enjoined upon Waldy was that of supplying passengers with horses from Philadelphia to Newcastle or to the Falls. It was this requirement of the post-rider that eventually caused his retirement. 'Lead horses' for the accommodation of travelers frequently accompanied the post, but this was found to interfere with the efficiency of the service, hence the introduction of the stage coach as soon as the condition of the roads permitted."

Washington's supreme life purpose
was symbolized by the Postal Service, that great agency for the promotion of intercommunication and mutual understanding. During his entire career he labored to break down barriers, to eliminate dividing lines and to build a great community through communication. Born in the East, he died only a few miles from his birthplace, yet
no man of his age visioned a mighty American empire as did Washington.
As youthful surveyor, road builder,
commander of armies, member of legislature and Congress, President of the Constitutional Convention and President of the United States, he struggled to make a united nation out of disconnected fragments, and out of disunion to bring unity. Naturally indeed, he promoted the cause of postal com-

Overwhelming Demand For Resubmission in Texas

DALLAS, Tex., July 25.—(INS)—An overwhelming demand for resubmission of the Eighteenth Amendment and the apparent triumph of Miriam "Ma" Ferguson in her battle for the gubernatorial nomination today are the outstanding results of Saturday's state Democratic primary election.

The proposed submission to the people of the alternative between repeal and retention of the prohibition amendment had already received the support of Texas Democrats by more than a two to one plurality in partial returns from 235 of the state's 254 counties.

The tabulation at this point revealed 184,686 votes for resubmission and 78,474 against.

Mrs. Ferguson who served as Governor from 1924 to 1926 only to be rejected for re-election, amassed 250,737 ballots as against 178,728 for Governor Ross Sterling, her nearest rival.

MAN'S PERENNIAL ENEMY

Alarm and apprehension there will be to learn that rats are on the increase. The menace to health, to say nothing of the utter repulsiveness of the creatures, is sufficient to cause uneasiness.

But however unpleasant this news may be, there is yet that in the discussion of the situation to relieve the public's dejection, perhaps completely counteract it with a sort of elation.

In one sense of the word the public has always been rat conscious, and in another sense it is only now becoming rat conscious. That is, it has always feared and loathed the rodents but never sufficiently to undertake a concerted drive for their extermination. Today, real efforts are being made to decimate the rat population.

Rats destroy property, spread disease and cause more discomfort and annoyance than a troubled conscience. A large part of the world's food production is consumed by them, and by their mere presence they make an even greater part of it unfit for human consumption.

It is a matter of economy and thrift to spend a generous amount each year in the extermination of rats and mice. No owner of a building, whether home or warehouse, can afford to permit rodents to overrun it unmolested.

Effective methods of rodent extermination have been developed in recent years and are in wide usage. Every community has at least one professional exterminator whose efforts effectually augment the poison and trap campaigns of the laity.

ESTATES

Nothing could so well reflect the general high average of financial intelligence and financial competency of the American people as the rapidly increasing lists of those who seek the experience and resources of banks in the conservation and disposition of estates.

It was only 15 years ago that the Federal Reserve Board began issuing permits to banks to take on trust features, but 2,200 banks have already availed themselves of the privilege. They represent 29 per cent of the banks in the Federal Reserve System, and have a total capital of $700,000,000, or 60 per cent of the capital of the national banks in the United States.

From these figures it is apparent the trust feature of banking has grown at a rate to fully justify its establishment. The banks have found the monetary feature a profitable addition to their banking business. Moreover it tends to widen the range of the clientele that appears at the bank windows as depositors.

The exercise by banks of trust powers gives to the client the assurance that the entire national banking system is, in a way, back of the trust that has been created. The plan makes for the safeguarding and increase of fortunes.

Further evidence of the growing prosperity and wealth of the American people is seen in the large number of trusts and estates settled by trust companies.

If everyone would have his or her watch cleaned, it is estimated that this would give employment to 1,000,000 men for 10 minutes.

Loss to Stage

With the death of Florenz Ziegfeld, famous musical comedy producer, at Hollywood, Cal., the stage has lost one of its most colorful and successful figures. Known all over the world as the foremost authority on feminine pulchritude, Ziegfeld had an extraordinarily successful career as the "glorifier of the American girl." He had been ill since February.

"MURDER of the NIGHT CLUB LADY"

THE NEW THATCHER COLT DETECTIVE MYSTERY
BY ANTHONY ABBOT

Copyright, 1931, by Covici-Friede Inc., Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

SYNOPSIS

Lola Carewe, night club habituee, receives a death threat. New Year's Eve. Previously her dog and parrot were mysteriously killed. District Attorney Merle K. Dougherty suspects Lola of being the "brains" of the jewel thief ring that has baffled the police. Although her husband, Gaylord Gifford, died practically penniless, Lola lives in luxury. Police Commissioner Thatcher Colt places a guard in Lola's penthouse apartment, warning her that she must not be alone in a room at any time. Mrs. Carewe, Lola's mother; Chung the butler, Eunice the maid, and Vincent Rowland, an attorney, are present. In the living room, the Commissioner finds a bag belonging to Christine Quires, Lola's guest. It evidently had been used that night, yet Lola informs Colt that Christine is at the Lion's Paw, a roadhouse, where Lola was to have joined her. Colt is surprised to find Mrs. Carewe's room in strange contrast to the surrounding wealth. Lola's own boudoir is a gaudy contradiction of the living room's elegance. Lola refuses to reveal the identity of the young man whose photograph adorns her dresser.

CHAPTER SEVEN

"MISS LOX, please go to Miss Carewe at once. Remain with her until relieved."

Hearing this order the mother came hurriedly out of her room.

"Please don't mind my daughter," she pleaded. "All her life she has had her own way. Spoiled, no doubt. But good at heart. Why not let me go to her instead?"

"One of my people must guard her," Colt insisted. "But you may go with Miss Lox."

Mrs. Carewe shrugged her shoulders with a foreigner's disapproving resignation. She followed Dorothy Lox to the bedroom door where the girl operative knocked and, receiving no answer, opened the door. Mother and detective then entered the boudoir and were hidden from the view.

Colt stalked to the fireplace and struck a gong suspended from the mantel. Chung instantly responded.

"Who is Miss Carewe's physician?" he asked sharply.

"Doctor Hugh Baldwin, who occupies the seventh suite on the second floor of this twenty-three-story building," supplied Chung, placid and grave.

"Please telephone him and if he is in ask him to come here at once. If not, let me know—we must get someone!"

Betraying no surprise, Chung turned on his flat heels and waddled from the room. But neither Dougherty nor Rowland were so self-controlled. At once both attorneys leaped from their chairs, confronting Colt and demanding to know why he had called a physician.

"Unless I have read her wrong, Lola Carewe is due for an attack of hysteria," predicted Colt.

Both the District Attorney and his elderly conferees looked relieved.

"Then it was not because you anticipated violence?" asked Rowland.

Colt lit a cigarette.

"I don't know what to anticipate," he confessed. "But of one thing I feel sure—I have accounted for every human being in this apartment—and no one else can get in without being discovered."

Here Colt sent me to the door to inform Lieutenant Fallon that Doctor Baldwin should be allowed to enter. When I returned, Dougherty and Rowland were lighting cigars.

"With all the safeguards that you have thrown about Lola now, Thatcher," protested the District Attorney, with a pop-eyed glance around him, "there can certainly be no more real danger—if there ever was any," he finished dourly.

Vincent Rowland nodded.

"If, after all that you have done,

Unexpectedly, the bedroom door opened and Lola Carewe appeared.

Mr. Colt," he remarked, "the life of Lola Carewe were to be taken now, right under the nose of the Police Commissioner and the District Attorney, why that would be a miracle, really, wouldn't it?"

A spiral plume of purple smoke ascended from Colt's pursed lips.

"It would look like a masterpiece of murder," he agreed. "But perhaps that is what is intended."

"I don't understand," confessed Vincent Rowland plaintively.

"No one knows how the dog and parrot died," explained Colt. "Suppose the murderer were rehearsing—with some new and subtle poison compound that leaves no trace?"

A burst of laughter came from behind the closed door of Lola's boudoir. All three women—mother, daughter, and detective—seemed inexplicably to be laughing together. Their mirth had a weird sound. What could they be laughing about?

Vincent Rowland flicked the ashes from his cigar.

"Nothing's going to happen to Lola," he decided, comforting himself. "She has a very short temper,—just a child. You know, my dear Colt, she has a most undeserved reputation as a high liver. Her reputation is almost operative—I mean people think of her as a kind of Tosea living in present-day Manhattan. Nothing could be more absurd. Lola seems insincere and frothy, but she is really a decent sort."

"What is your interest in her?" Colt asked.

There was a silence, broken only by the drone of an ice-making machine in Chung's spotless kitchen.

"I am interested in Lola Carewe," Vincent Rowland replied, almost defensively, "because she has sound ideas about modern art. I think she is an original spirit in decoration. Look at these rooms! Some of her effects were exhibited at the Modern Designers Gallery last spring. She is a very superior person at heart—an enigma really."

"Do you know any person who might wish her dead?" pursued Colt.

Vincent Rowland sat there, his cigar held by his teeth, while he lifted the skin of his face by pressing the tips of his forefingers upward at his temples. All the while he watched in a wall-mirror as if anxious to see what face-surgery might accomplish for him. At Colt's question, he pushed the old skin higher and smiled like a satyr.

"There are plenty of men who have tried to lay their hearts at her feet, since Gifford's sudden death. She has refused them all. I don't believe any of her disappointed males would murder. Still jealousy

"Might there not be other motives?" suggested Dougherty, studying a diamond ring on his own finger.

Vincent Rowland frowned, and lowered his fingers from their vain employment.

"Perhaps! There is one curious circumstance which, maybe, I should not tell. When I first met her—"

Unexpectedly, the bedroom door opened and Lola Carewe appeared, wearing a peach-colored woolen bathrobe, with straight, black stripes. She was bright and smiling.

"Please don't be angry with me, Mr. Commissioner," she apologized. "That woman detective of yours is so charming—she laughed me out of my mind. I realize I have behaved very badly."

"Say no more about it," dismissed Colt.

"What time is it now?" she called gaily. "How long before the dead-line?"

"It is just five minutes to three o'clock," Colt informed her.

"And during those five minutes you ought to obey every request of the Police Commissioner—to the letter, Lola, to the letter," enjoined Vincent Rowland severely.

Her hand was on the knob and her cheek laid against the door.

"I will be back in just a moment," she gurgled. "I left a cigarette case in here!" I saw that Colt was right; she was dangerously on the edge of hysteria. For a moment, no one spoke. There was a solemn quiet in the room, a silence almost ominous, as if we were on the eve of a serious discovery. Far down below us in the streets someone was blowing a horn; a childish sound, incongruous and ludicrously inappropriate. A shadow marched past the window blind; one of Colt's men passing in his sentinel march on the terrace.

OUR DAILY FOOD

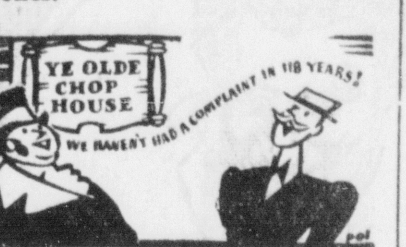

By COLONEL GOODBODY

AN OLD CHOP-HOUSE MEAL

HERE'S a man's menu:

Broiled steak; baked potatoes; grilled tomatoes; hearts of lettuce salad with cheese dressing; rolls and butter; lime fruit cup; and coffee.

There's a meal men like - If the number of chop houses around the country is any indication. That's the kind of meal that has been a sure-fire hit ever since the horses browsed along Broadway and ate the grass from between the cobble stones.

Lime fruit cup is a not-too-heavy dessert to top off a substantial meal. And it's easy to make.

There are only four ingredients - one package of lime-flavored fruit gelatin; one pint of boiling water; one cup of diced pineapple and one cup of strawberries, cut in halves.

Dissolve the fruit gelatin in boiling water, pour into a shallow pan and chill. When it is firm cut the gelatin in cubes. Chill the pineapple and strawberries. (You can add sugar to the strawberries if you wish). Mix the lime gelatin cubes and the fruit just before serving.

You know I like to see that just like is done to the temples of plain cooking. I feel that a monument should be raised to the old-fashioned mutton chop.

I believe that the French cooking is real art but the plain cooking of steaks, roasts and chops offers added variety that is the very necessary spice of life.

As I remember the oldest restaurant in New York City is a chop house.

It's downtown, and it's called "Ye Olde Chop House." For over one hundred and thirty years it hasn't changed its location or its menu. Old prints that have adorned its walls for a hundred years still are admired by the diners. No fuss, no frills, no compromise with the bare oak of the tables and the plain fare served on them.

The point is this: The French chef puts his heart and soul into the preparation of a sauce that will make the meat taste good but the chop house chef must broil or roast the meat so carefully that it will be perfect, unadorned. And when I visited this chop house several years ago they claimed they hadn't had a complaint in one hundred and eighteen years.

STATE NEWS

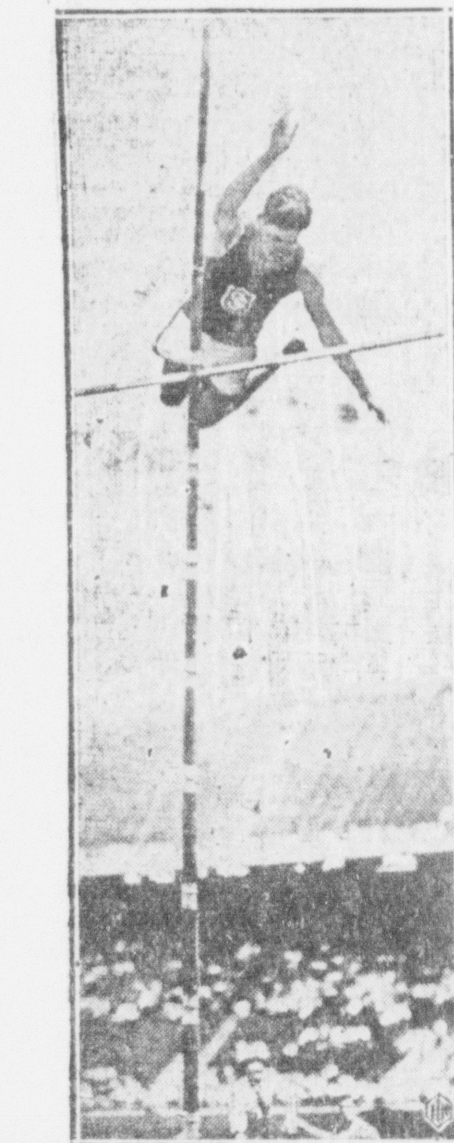

TO RESUME INQUIRIES

Harrisburg, July 25.—With the purpose of the meeting cloaked in secrecy, the Senate committee investigating charges against W. D. B. Alney, Public Service Commission chairman, was ordered to meet at 4 o'clock this afternoon at the office of Governor Gifford Pinchot at the request of the executive. The committee is scheduled to resume the inquiry at 8 o'clock tonight. The charges against Alney were made by A. A. Chapman, former secretary to the late Thomas E. Mitten, head of Mitten Management, and the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company, who claims Alney received large annual payments of money from Mitten through A. B. Mallar, former employe of the P. R. T. The company books were examined last week and considerable interesting data was found but nothing tracing any of the Mitten money to Alney was uncovered.

DESPAIR OF GIRL'S LIFE

Camden, N. J., July 25.—Little hope was maintained today for the recovery of Florence Rigginano, 16, Williams-town, N. J., who lies dying in the West Jersey Homeopathic Hospital here, the victim of an accidental shot fired by two small boys. The shooting occurred

U. S. Olympic Hope

Nothing short of an accident will prevent William Graber, shown above in action, from scoring for Uncle Sam in the pole vault at the Olympic Games. Graber, who wears the colors of the University of Southern California, broke all records at the Olympic trials by topping the bar at 14 feet 4 3/4 inches.

while Florence was picking huckleberries with her sister, Jean, near Cross Keys. Under arrest in connection with the affair are Walter Parcel, 12, and his brother, Francis, 14, of Philadelphia. Police believe the shooting was accidental.

TO PATRONIZE EACH OTHER

Ottawa, July 25.—Canada and the United States will continue to be each other's "best customer" despite any agreement worked out at the Imperial Conference here for greater trade within the British Empire. This view was expressed by qualified American observers after watching and weighing the results of the first week of the British Imperial Economic Conference. Soviet Russia appears to be the biggest potential losers in the economic conference.

SEEK BOARDER IN KILLING

Philadelphia, July 25.—Joseph Kees, 53, of this city, was sought for questioning today in connection with the death of Catherine Reynolds, found with her throat slashed in her cottage at Strathmere, N. J. Police of Cape May Court House, after a brief probe, asked local police to locate Kees. Mrs. Reynolds' body was found by her husband, Robert, upon his arrival for his week-end visit. A complete set of finger prints, supposedly those of the slayer, were found at the scene of the crime, together with a hammer and a pen-knife. Kees was said to have been a former boarder at the Reynolds home in Philadelphia.

She's in the Pink

College life is not all brain-racking study of abstruse subjects. There's a brighter side to it, and here it is. The young student so obviously enjoying herself is Anna Joan of Brooklyn, N. Y., who is demonstrating the method she used in winning the watermelon-eating contest at the campus frolic at New York University.

U. S. Olympic Hope

Eddie Tolan (above) of Detroit is looked upon as a sure point scorer for Uncle Sam in the 100- and 200-metre sprints at the Olympic Games. The former University of Michigan negro star finished second to Ralph Metcalfe in the tryouts in both events.

ISIS POLK DEED

ROCKFORD, Ill.—A flourishing signature, "James K. Polk," adorns a deed in the possession of G. A. Smith of Rockford. The document which carries the signature of the eleventh president of United States deeded a tract of land in Winnebago County, Ill., to James Hulse, great-grandfather of the owner of the ancient paper. It was drawn up in 1848. Title is given by the deed to 80 acres of land three and one-half miles north of Pesotona, Ill.

HOTBEDS HELP PLANTS

MANZANOLA, Colo.—Electrically-heated hotbeds, by providing even temperature conditions, cause plants to advance in growth from ten days to two weeks ahead of plants grown in hotbeds not electrically heated. Experiments conducted at Manzanola during the past two months have demonstrated the more-than-satisfactory results of electrical heating in hotbeds.

THE Davis Cup preliminaries were expected to eliminate the teams of every nation except England and the United States. Then Uncle Sam and John Bull were going to swap serves for the privilege of meeting France, holder of the cup.

This order of things had become almost a continual habit, and no one in tennis circles seriously doubted that 1932's results would be the same.

Then along came Germany. Germany, with her singles aces, Daniel Prehn and Gottfried Von Cramm.

Germany stacked up against England.

Facing each other across the net were Herr Von Cramm and Bunny Austin, most famous racquet wielder in King George's domain. And Herr Prehn and Fred Perry, the latter being reckoned one of the best tournament competitors in the tennis domain.

But Von Cramm snowed Austin under 5-7, 6-2, 6-3, 6-2; then Prehn outlasted Perry, 6-2, 6-4, 3-6, 0-6, 7-5.

So Perry and Austin, both of whom were simply aching for another crack at young Ellsworth Vines, who has fast been shaping into the ace tennis player of the decade, were eliminated. Their chance, if any, will not come now before 1933.

Just a short while ago, tennis experts the world over, rating on performance, listed the three top players of the universe as follows.

1. Cochet, France.
2. Austin, England.
3. Vines, United States.

By his failure against the representatives of the Vaterland, Austin certainly dropped out of this select trio.

On his play at Wimbledon, in which he was eliminated in the second round, Cochet seems ready to go. That would leave Vines sitting in the throne once held by Tilden.

But Cochet is still more formidable than he looked at Wimbledon. He never played well there. In the years of his greatest glory, his play on the English court was best described as miserable. In the Davis Cup play, well—that has been a different matter.

There is no doubt now, however, that the battle for world tennis supremacy among individuals has narrowed down to a finish contest between Cochet and Vines. They'll be at it before long.

GILLETTE PATENTS HELD VALID

● In a decision just handed down by the United States District Court, District of Connecticut, Gillette patents in that suit were declared valid. The defendants were held liable for costs and damages. Thus the patented advantages exclusive with Gillette razors and blades are clearly demonstrated.

For eight years of his life Washington was commander-in-chief of the Continental Army; for more than 50 years he was outstanding champion of the intercommunication which alone could make possible a people's government. In war he created nationality; in peace he fostered the intercommunication which alone could preserve the nation.
